Hungarians reveal real aspects in the revolt

Four student delegates from Hungary made speeches titled "Under the War Fire in Budapest" at the Third Conference Room of Keio University on June 22.

They came to Japan under the sponsorship of the Preparation Committee for Receiving Hungarians.

There has been much reverberation about the Hungarians Revolt in some quarters here in Japan. The capacity audience could understand how these delegates experienced directly the bloody tumult and what opinions they had to the present world problems.

Though there seemed to be considerably much lack of understanding because of the difference of languages, attendants also expressed their unreserved opinions from their respective standpoints.

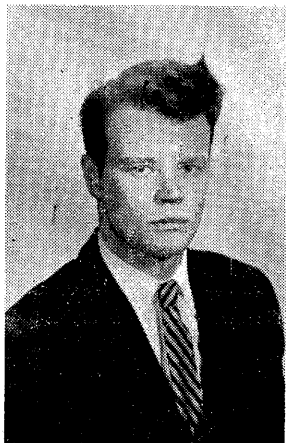

These students are scheduled to make a lecture tour of Japan for three weeks.

Hungarian students were asked "what is the purpose of your coming to Japan and why don't you stay in your country and help build up the new regime in Hungary now recovering from the destruction done in the revolt?" To this question, one of them replied "In our country the present regime never permits everybody to express or write his frank opinion, freely and fearlessly through the means of communication," and he picked up one instance to prove it, "Even those who visited Hungary just before the revolt couldn't make out what was happening there and such situation continues still now." Then he concluded that they came to Japan to make understood what their compatriots in Hungary were forbidden to appeal to the world.

Before the exchange of opinions they explained how Hungarian students spent their college life and how they were enjoying sports, such as football, baseball, swimming, judo and so on.

In the end they appreciated the invitation to Keio University.

Mr B Marshall here from Stanford Univ.

Mr. Byron Marshall, the prospective first exchange student from Stanford University is expected to be here by the beginning of July. Majoring in Philosophy, he expressed his interest in Japan Literature and History in his letter to Prof. Kiyooka. He also stated that the chance now offered to American college students to visit Far East is quite limited and in that sense, Keio-Stanford Scholarships occupies a very unique position in that field. He will be staying with the Odas, whose son is now in the U.S. as the exchange student from Keio to Stanford. This year, Mr. Tadashi Sakurai, a senior of the Faculty of Economics, has been selected as the second exchanger from Keio.

Prince Mikasa gives 1st lecture at Keio

Prince Mikasa gave a lecture on the theme of "The relation between water and man in Southeast Asia," on June 12 at the Lecture room of Keio.

He was invited by the seminar which is made of professors and students of Oriental History Department of the Faculty of Literature.

This was the first time that an Imperial Prince ever delivered a lecture in Keio University.

He insisted that water had much to do with human prosperity, showing to the audience the films, giving humorous explanations, which he had shot all the way through the trip.

Keio Autonomous Committee designs the establishment of a new moderate student union

Keio Autonomous Committee opened the first Executive Director's Conference since the revision of the agreement and staffs and decided to set about moderate student activities.

The decision of positive promotion of it was the response of outsiders' high appraisal for the Committee's neutralization and the Committee is expected to take a bold leap to outside fields.

The conference was attended by Chairman Ohno, and other Department Directors and Mr. Tsukura, Director of International Dept., explained the present problems and the relations of influence among student associations. And he stressed the necessity of a student union which represents student in a real sense of it, and solves student problems from the student standpoint, because the National Federation of Student Self-Government Association (Zengakuren) does not always represent the student position.

Keio Autonomous Committee has been highly valued its neutralization by other outside universities' autonomous committees. Since present activities of other student associations are said to show political-mindedness, the Committee has been demanded to show its activities.

The members discussed prudently and as the result, although they did not intend entirely to go against Zengakuren, they decided to make a neutral student body without losing the student position.

But as such a big union body cannot be organized in a few days, they also planned to have a preparative organization called N.P.C. (National Preparative Committee) which aims at the exchange of information among members of each university's autonomous committee and as the final body N.U.S. (National Union of Student).

Keio Autonomous Committee have put a pending question in practice and at the same time the relations between Keio students and the Committee are expected to become more closer with its activities for outside.

PUC asks Ed Ministry for univ setting-up Standard hike

The Private University Council (headed by Prof. Koji Ushioda, the former President of Keio Gijyuku (University)) submitted on June 15 to Education Minister Nadao the proposal that the mushrooming increase in number of newly established private universities be barred by raising the standard of qualification for the establishment of new schools.

This proposal calls for any prospective private universities to have twice as much assets and monetary funds as those provided for by the present 'School Establishment Law' in order to prevent the building-up of new private universities in bad financial condition.

Reliable sources said that officials of Education Ministry readily took up this proposal for deliberation, and it is believed that they have no objection to this plan in principle.

It is said that the Education Ministry intends to map out a suitable measure in answer to this proposal not later than next September when the registration of the organization of new schools for 1958 is to be done.

As a result of this, it is generally considered that it will not be an easy task to set up new schools from next spring onward.

Much attention is paid to the fact that some people who are concerned with education seem to have gone so far as to inquire into the undesirable trend of money' seen among some 'keeping the school for making private universities.

Kato, third baseman of Keio, stole the third base and made the chance of adding two more points in 4th inning at 2nd game.

Ball League ends Keio gets 2nd place

Tokyo Six University Baseball League ended with the traditional clash between Keio and Waseda on June 8 and 9 at the Jingu Stadium.

In the opening game Keio beat Waseda 7-2 in 17 innings, the longest record of K-W series. Though the spring championship was already in the hand of Rikkyo University, more than 65,000 ball fans filled the Stadium to the brim. The general prospects were quite unfavorable to Keio, for Hayashi, ace pitcher of Keio suffered the motor accident that made him impossible to appear on the plate for a month in addition to the misfortune that southpaw Tatsumi was wounded in the Keio and Rikkyo series.

Against fans expectation, however, Keio sent Tatsumi on the mound. In the second inning Keio scored two runs on two hits and three walks from Sakurai, ace hurler of Waseda. Tatsumi allowed Waseda to tie in the lucky seventh inning on a triple by Mori, to score Miyazaki and Kaburagi who singled and walked, respectively. Takahashi relieved Tatsumi in the middle of the seventh inning and checked Waseda from adding another run. In the 17 inning, Nagano who had smashed four hits that day doubled between center and right, Kuromatsu walked and then Takahashi singled to score Nagano. Keio added in this inning four more runs on successive errors by outfielders of Waseda and Nagao's double. It was praiseworthy that Sakurai went through all 17 innings. Keio whipped Waseda 4A-2 in the second game as well before some 65,000 ball fans and secured the second place in the final standing.

Waseda leaded Keio in the second inning to score a run on three singles, but Keio promptly tied and took the lead in the third inning on a single, a stolen base and an error by Waseda. Kuromatsu granted Keio another pair of runs in the fourth inning by tripling to right.

Job-hunt guidance starts

The orientation program for the seniors who are to find jobs this year has started with the annual lecture meetings held by the Placement Section of the university on May 24 to 27. The lecturers were Professor Imazumi, head of the Section, Mr. Hashiba, vice head, and the Directors of each faculties. It was disclosed that students could apply for two companies at one time through the university this year.

While the student's personal interview with the staffs of the Section commenced on June 1 and will last for about a month. Students are requested to submit their personal statement, list of school record, a copy of census register and other documents.

Unfair distribution of ball tickets closed up

It was reported by the Mita, Keio and Waseda Press that there was the question as to the distribution system of the admission tickets of K-W series. The joint survey of the three Presses shows the fact that only 350 tickets for the public at large were issued at the booking office, though the seats were filled with some 60,000 fans and that the other tickets were sold out through the league officials who strongly refused to disclose the detail of the present ticket circulation.

It is much needed that all the tickets which go into market should be sold publicly and not through corruptible connections in order to give as many opportunities to see the K-W series as possible to the families of Keio students and other eager ball fans who have nothing to do with the league officials.

The further survey by the mentioned group with sincere support and encouragement is expected.

2 victories at debating contests in both English and Japanese

Keio English Speaking Society won the First National Inter-collegiate English Debating Contest held on June 9 at the Maimichi Auditorium in Osaka under the auspices of I.S.A. (International Student Association of Japan).

Keio defeated Kobe Foreign Language School after a closely-fought oral battle.

Keio University, the winner, was awarded the Trophy from the representative of the English Mainichi.

The two teams were engaged in a heated argument on whether "the continued development of Japan as an industrial society makes impossible the development of a specific Japanese culture," the Kobe students took the affirmative side and Keio the negative.

Both teams revealed their debating ability fairly well in spite of the fact that the subject of discussion was presented only half an hour before the contest, instead of the usual system of letting the contestants talk on a previously selected subject.

The members of Keio University consisted of: Masami Kogi (senior); Susumu Eto (senior); Hiroshi Egami (senior); Tetsuji Sato (junior) and Hirotosugu Noguchi (junior).

The board of judges consisted of: Reginal Breton, British vice-consul, Osaka; Robert W. Denby, assistant civilian personal officer, Itami Air Base; H. Shepherd, director, Shepherd English Institute, Toyonaka; John A. Stoops, professor of Wakayama University and Shusabro Hironaga, associate editor of the English Mainichi.

Keio Oratorical Club defeated Waseda in the Keio-Waseda Speech Contest held at the Okuma Auditorium of Waseda Univ. under the sponsorship of Asahi Shimbun on June 5. In the competition there were three themes: political, economic and cultural one. Keio won over Waseda in political and cultural themes. The political theme was "Communist China should not be approved promptly under the present world situation."

Keio took the affirmative side against Waseda. The economic theme was "Union of public enterprise must be given the right of going on strike." Keio was against this opinion.

"Lady Chatterley's Lover is a indecent novel" was the cultural theme. The Keio orator was also against it.

In the freshmen's speech, Fukutaro Matsumoto, sophomore of Faculty of Politics of Keio, won the second prize. He made a speech on the theme of "Democratization of Japan and newspaper." Takayuki Okabe, sophomore of Faculty of Economics of Keio, won the third prize. His theme was "On a European common market."

Farewell party in honor of Prof Meren held

A farewell luncheon party in honor of Prof. Arthur Von Meren of Harvard University was held at the Memorial Hall of Keio at noon, on June 17.

Prof. Meren has been in Japan for over a year since he came here under the Exchange of Law Scholars Program.

He has been giving lectures on Comparative Law and Int'l Law at Tokyo University.

Though he has no official connection with Keio he has used the laboratory for law in Keio.

Persons at present were: President Okui, Prof. Koike (Int'l Law), Minemura (Labor Law), Kiyooka (Dean of Foreign Affairs Dept.), Kobayashi (Anglo-American Law), Hitomi (Criminal Law), Takatori (Commercial Law), and Prof. and Mrs. Von Meren, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Rabinowitz.

Be on the go, out and out this vacation

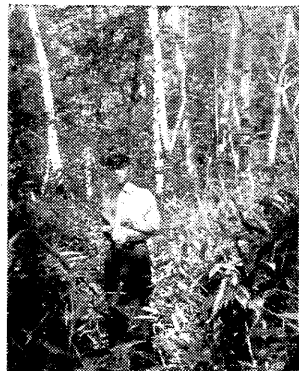

Summer is come. It means the 60-days-summer vacation is near at hand to which all the students are looking forward, not to speak of all the professors who are to make best of the holidays in stead of sabbatical leave in the U.S. Of course there are various kinds of ways in which Keio boys and girls enjoy themselves during the vacation. Someone may confine himself in his study to keep up with his classmates or to devote himself to his research, somebody may kill it just taking a nap all day long or spend it idling a way. We can't say which is better.

Kidoike camp ground, Shigakogen-plateau.

The most popular cases of spending the holidays are to go sea-bathing, mountaineering, touring, camping alone or with friends, or staying in camps for physical training or concerted actions. Needless to say, there are also many students who work harder or who seek for part-time jobs to pay the way through university.

Then let's see some cases how Keio students tide over the vacation.

Taking the air among the white birches in Karuizawa.

Camping

Famous camping resorts are Yamanaka Lake side, Akakura, where mountain retreats of Keio are located, Kamikochi and Karuizawa. There students enjoy natural circumstances and different type of living from that of dusty metropolis; white birches and pines bristle, birds are twittering.

In the evening they sit in a happy circle surrounding a campfire and interchange views of life, love and so on.

Harder ways to pass the summer

You may be looking forward to more easier way of life during the vacation. Taking nap from 9 a.m. in the refrigerator until 4 p.m. or something of that kind. But if you are getting idler, I must remind you of some groups of students who are taking the life in more difficult way.

Rugger men will have practice during the holidays as every year around the middle of August. For two weeks they have to get up at six o'clock every morning and must run about eight kilometers before breakfast. Before dinner they must go through more than eight hours of practice under the scorching sunshine at the lake-side of Yamanaka. Tennis players will have hard time too, for the freshmen and sophmores are offered the good chance of showing oneself up in the tournament which will be held especially for them at the later part of the vacation. The skiers, although this may sound quite strange, get their shares. When there is nothing white except ice-cream at tea-rooms, they will have the toughest plan...they run more than 24 kilos every day, in order to strengthen their foot and belly muscles.

So I would like to tell you that if you have no particular idea of spending the summer, and rather inclined to waste it, why don't you join one of these clubs? Other sports organizations which I did not pick up here have such plans too. You are sure to find something worthwhile. And it may add you 'backbone', which old timers claim you lack, or at least it will give you the stabilities which Keio boys are apt to lack.

Climbing

The mountain-climbing season begins at the second half in July and ends at the early part of August. Mt. Fuji, Yatsugatake-Range and Japan-Alps are the most popular and easy destination for climbers.

A note from Prof Hirai, Head of Student Affairs Section

On the coming summer vacation, I intend to relate some points to which it is desirable for you, students, to refer. In the vacation, I think, most of you will travel from place to place. It is very nice. It is rather difficult for you to make a trip after graduation and after all, as the students days is the golden season of life, to add to your experiences or train bodies by traveling are of deep significance.

Prof. Hirai

So, as to me, summer is the most important season.

Generally speaking, Keio students do not take kindly to books. It is true. Then, let me embrace this opportunity of urging you to read those classics which you must read outside of schools and at ordinary times, you have no chance to read and which can be your best companions to go through your life with. Everyday works that you are taught at school may be, in this time, the secondary consideration. You must try to get in a broad sense. This, I believe, will surely be of great use in various forms for you in the future.

Now you are no longer little children, so I'll never put in my ear for you to form a plan not a waste time. But nothing is more difficult than this to practice without reference to our age. Keio students comparatively live a blessed life as compared with those of other universities. Accordingly you must not waste your time.

Next I want to say a word about arbeit. Recently the number of students who want to take arbeit is remarkably increasing.

Of course there may be those who must do arbeit owing to unavoidable circumstances. But other students who have not so urgent reason of their seeking jobs must give their way to the students in need. This is the duty and the proper way of students.

Lastly, as such cases have happened every year, that some parties of Keio held dancing parties or concerts in the country without permission of the Student Affairs Section. Such conduct must be absolutely forbidden and in case of holding such performances, you must do exceedingly with maintaining your dignity as students and do not behave so indecently for money.

After all, the most important thing for you is to realize that now is the most important time for you all and completely enjoy your university life.

Note: 'arbeit' means a part-time job for students, especially during the vacation.

Mt. Yariyatake, one of the most famous peaks in the Japan Alps, from the southern top of Mt. North Hodaka.

Touring

In summer time, tours in northern districts particularly in Hokkaido are made much of by students. Few of them have so much spare money as to go abroad but most students are heartily satisfied with beautiful scenery in inland.

Kappa-bashi, Kamikochi, a suspension bridge over Katsuragawa river. One can view the finest scenery of Hodaka mountain and Yakedake, of the Japan Alps.

Students cultivate their minds with experiences, temporarily getting into the business circles

This summer, too, lots of students are to be employed by departments-stores, somebody as sales-men or somebody as messenger-boys. Sometimes they even take parts of night-visits of the departments stores. Thus about for 20 days they work at

A porter carrying packs for the customers various kinds of shops and stores, to pay their ways through colleges or to save their allowances to travel or to go camping. Usually they earn from 250 yen to 300 yen a day. If they keep work longer than the on-duty-time, they are to get 30 yen of extra-money an hour. Here we introduce some stories of those part-timers to you all readers.

First: Mr. G., working at D-store, was employed at his first opportunity by the personnel bureau of the company when he told them he is an expert of 'Karate' or one of the Judo-like sports. They employed him as a gate-man. He is now sitting on a stool inside the small gate where only the employees get in or out. He watches people passing before him and questions them. Thus he is so-called a BTO of the store. In his case the old saying 'one's skillfulness helps one' can be literally applied. He is working to save his allowances and at the same time to kill his leisure. So in a sense he is killing 'two birds with a stone.'

Secondly: Mr. N., a messenger-boy of T-department store, is now working to pay the school tuition. Trouble is, he is too good natured to take a part of a messenger-boy, for here we have an interesting episode about him. On a hot day, the first day of his messenger-boy, he left the office riding a bicycle fully-loaded with articles and commodities in his charge. In the evening when he returned to the office quite tired with locating the customer's residences, the bicycle was still fully-loaded.

He delivered only two parcels. Remember, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. for about 9 hours, he took much pains to locate only two residences. Pity was he who earned only 8 yen for his 9 hour sweaty hard work. For he was employed by the number of the parcels which he finished delivering to the customers, that is 4 yen per one parcel.

Besides those working at shops and stores there are also lots of students who are earning some money by tutoring during the holidays. True 80 per cent of the tutors are those who usually keep their tutorings throughout the year. But in summer, the situation is a little different. For among usual-tutors there are not a small people who have to return to their native places sometimes to see their parents and relatives, sometimes to work at their native towns. But all the parents who hire students as a tutor are apt to want their beloved children to work harder during the holidays. So for the purpose of encouraging them they are impatient to hire ardent and able students as a extra-tutor. In the case of Mr. T., sophomore of the Faculty of Economics, he has decided to give up all the plans to enjoy himself except to travel to the Hokkaido early in August with his bosom friend, an Indian studying here. When Mr. C, his friend asked him to go on traveling with him he refused just as he did this spring when Mr. C, decided to make a tour to the Kyushu District. Mr. T, however, accepted Mr. C's proposal. For he himself heartily wants to enjoy himself and also not to put his friend to the troubles which he may meet with in the unknown-places. He got the OK from the parents of his student but he is thinking of going on tutor's every day before he starts not to make a blank in the schedule of 11-year-old girl in his charge.

After school
Quo Vadis?

Dance party is one of the most popular thing among today's students. They enjoy their evenings dancing with friends. During the vernal and autumnal dancing party seasons every weekends welcome students to the ball's. Now most popular halls among Keio boys are P Hotel ball room and the S International Hall.

Each has its own merits and demerits. The P Hotel ball room is so oblong that musics cannot be heard in the opposite corner to the band but its beautiful garden will always soothe your sweaty legs and invite you to walk with your favorite friends.

S International Hall is spacious but there is no comfortable place for resting such as the garden at P Hotel's case.

In a few minutes' walk from Shinagawa Station you can get to the P Hotel but if you are with some else that means to you very much it is advisable to use taxi, because dusty gravel walk always tucks the high heels.

After dancing on the gliding floor 60 yen of juice or 180 yen of beer is always at your own will. You may take a little walk with your best friend in the garden, and then the evening will be the unforgettable one to you.

'Le Paquebot Tenacity' charmed the hall

By Takaki Hayashi, chief of Keio Theatrical Society

On June 25 Keio Theatrical Society successfully played "Le Paquebot Tenacity" at Hitotsubashi Auditorium, Kanda. This is a contribution by Takaki Hayashi, chief of the society, which tells how they prepared for the performance of the day.

We played the three acts of Charles Vildrac's "Le Paquebot Tenacity" (translated into Japanese by Tamaki Yamada) as a link of International Theatre Month series. International Theatre Month is a movement promoted by the I.T.I. (International Theatre Institute) of UNESCO, which aims at attaining international friendship through theatrical activities on the worldwide scale.

At the end of this April, we are asked by the Japanese Center of I.T.I. if we had any intention of taking part in the first university drama performances as a part of the international theatrical events.

So we took the opportunity. We were never unwilling to join such joint performances where many university theatrical societies do their best. Besides, we were allowed to have the large hall all to ourselves for full one day. And the performances were not in the form of 'concours'.

Some members, however, did not favor the participation. Because, at that period, we were rehearsing our annual study performance whose only purpose was sincere study of a better action. Moreover, we have not joined for these several years in any sort of concours due to its troublesome technique. But, after all, we did well to join it.

Also taking parts were Waseda Univ. performing 'Of Mice and Men' by J. Steinbeck, Tokyo Univ., 'Na dne' by M. Gorkij, Rikkyo Univ., 'Morts sans sepulture' by J. P. Sartre, Gakushuin Univ., 'Les justes' by A. Camus, and Tokyo Univ. of Foreign Languages, 'Marius' by M. Pagnol.

In the process of rehearsal, we had three difficulties. 1. We have no auditorium where the play is put on the stage beforehand. 2. We have not even a rehearsing room. 3. The rehearsal takes much time.

After the lectures are over, we make up a little space in a lecture room by removing chairs and writing-tables. And when the practice is over, we must clean the room rearranging the removed things. On the way home, the traffic signal in front of the school gate is monotonously lighting its amber. With so many works to do, the members of the society are rather liable to neglect their classes, though the rehearsal is taken place when they have not lectures to attend.

Under these unfavorable conditions, we made preparation for the stage of June 25. The harder the circumstances were, the greater the pleasure we got later. You may ask why. That is because we love the drama. Only those who have an affection for this art can do such earnest efforts.

People often ask if we can do necessary studies as university students while spending much time in the stage work.

This is a difficult question. One answer is that there are so many students who are wasting their time in mahjong and others.

On the evening of May 17, the celebration for the performances of the six universities was held in anticipation at Asahi Hall gathering members from the respective societies. Kihachi Kitamura, director of the Japanese Center of I.T.I. addressed the audience. Then, movie pictures and several entertainments followed. We enjoyed ourselves very much.

The day came. On June 25, we played it. No comment should be made by ourselves. But we sincerely expect your Camus, and Tokyo Univ. of Frank criticism. And we are grateful that you came to see the play on the day of the performance. Thank you.

'Recent thoughts'

Series

Nowadays, the world, which has experienced two great wars in half a century, is passing the most important turning-point in history.

In other words, our time is in the middle of the abrupt transition which human being has never gone through, and the present crisis is much bigger and more serious than before. And then, what is it?

It contains the possibility that the history of mankind will end, with the explosion of hydrogen bombs at a nuclear war.

It is very plain that this war will not only disregard the value of culture and history, but also impair the dignity of our lives.

Thus, in face of such a crisis, the mere introductions and explanations of accomplished theories will be almost meaningless.

And then what is it that we need today? We need theories, through the close study of which we can cultivate and establish our own thought.

In this point this series will give us the power of dealing with our today's problems and discovering our tomorrow's direction.

In this sense we are very glad these volumes "Recent Thoughts" were published in the Iwanami Publishing Company.

Exactly speaking, the "Recent Thoughts" is to be put forth by 12 volumes, and 7 volumes of them have already been printed and the rest we shall soon see on the shelves of book-shops.

Here, we will try to review one volume of them "The Problems of Man."

There are two reasons why the problems of man are taken up in recent thoughts.

One is that, with the remarkable change of the political and social conditions of the world, people are coming to what they had not been.

And this new type of man we cannot explain at all with any accomplished thought of man. The other is that the present social and historical change is so violent that people are swallowed up in it and forgetting what they ought to be.

Namely, the existence of mankind is lacking stability in such a critical situation.

Then whether or not we can tide over such a crisis and, if possible, how to get it over are the recent problems of man.

We cannot understand and solve them without the consideration humanism, existentialism, nihilism, and freedom and moralism.

This volume, explaining these thoughts in detail, will open the way for our solution to the difficult problems of man.

This is the time for us to think our problems for ourselves. We cannot read these wonderful volumes without much interest.

For your eyes

On the screen

'Antarctica'

As the International Geophysical year is coming near, expedition teams of many countries are in the Antarctic Continent.

This is a documentary film which pictured struggles of the Japanese Antarctic Observation Team and the Japanese ice breaker, the Soya, that challenged the Antarctic Continent for half a year since last November.

This film begins with a scene of the calm Indian Ocean. In this passage to Cape Town, the Soya which is going slowly in the blue ocean is impressive. On the way to the Antarctic Continent from Cape Town the ship must get through the stormy sea. The only 2208 ton ice boat is made fun of by the storms.

Icebergs come in sight. Blue ocean gradually turns into miraculously beautiful pack ice. The Soya goes very slowly finding her way between the pack ice. Helicopters and hydro planes start from the ship to find open seas. This succession of trains is relaxed by humorous penguins and seals playing on the ice-field.

And then comes the climax: land of the Antarctic Continent comes in sight away in the distant haze.

On the endless ice field, a large amount of cargo is unloaded, dog sleds and weasels start to find the route of transportation to the base. Great amounts of food, observation instruments and other articles are carried ice anchors on the fast ice, transportation of articles and construction work of the Showa Base on Ongie Island follow there.

But on the way home, the ship is closed in by the pack of ice and is unable to move on, and is saved by the Russian ice-boat the Obi. This part of the film is bluish monochrome and it makes the uneasiness keener.

As above, this is a long film of 2 hours and 6 minutes which pictures beautiful landscape of polar regions and the struggle of the team vividly. But the reason why this film moves us deeply is that this movie describes human power doing their possible best for the only purpose of the scientific observation.

"Summer vacation is just around the corner!"

Campus at a glance

The nationwide influenza epidemic struck all Keio Gijuku, and brought about mass absences in primary, junior and senior high schools, especially the first. In that school (Yochisha) the school authorities ordered three day's absence to all the pupils due to the flu. In the university the flu was not so prevalent.

The Centenary executive committee, on May 31, unofficially decided to hold the celebration of the 100th anniversary of the foundation of the university late in October or early in November next year. It also decided to invite presidents from several foreign universities.

From campus to campus notes

Thirteen Waseda night-class students including four of the day-class started 'hunger strike' on the evening of June 12 for the abolition of the night-class and making the two classes into one. School authorities promised the following items unofficially:

1) The lecture time of the day-class shall be prolonged to 6 p.m.

2) The night-class shall be abolished.

But the students showed dissatisfaction at the former item which is disadvantageous to the working students.

The Kokugakuin Daigaku Shimbu deplors that the university's cafeteria is notorious for its expensive food and dirty equipment. Especially for students, young and active, for whom sufficient nutrition is keenly necessary, this is quite a threatening situation. The paper admits that judging from the frequent change of the manager of the cafeteria the running of it is by no means easy. It, however, strongly opposes the notion that this justifies poor taste and quality of the fare. The paper also takes a note that it is another dissatisfaction for the students that there are only limited items of fare, and the equipment is the worst. No wonder they lose their appetite.

The paper advocates as a measure for the improvement the cooperation between students, the owner of the cafeteria and the school authorities.

The cheering party problem of Chuo University was on the whole resolved by setting up a 'Reconstruction Conference' consisting of five student groups. The cheering party used violence when a welcome meeting for newcomers was held on May 12.

It is good that these students' problems were resolved by the student groups themselves.
